

Fall for Winter Whites

The white kitchen is a classic look that’s always in high demand—but for this recent TIDG project we gave the concept a modern twist. With breezy white walls, a striking slab stone backsplash, and even a white faucet, this kitchen sets the stage for sleek, dramatic metallic cabinets. The result is a perfect balance of beautiful minimalism and welcoming warmth—and a luxe look that is truly one of a kind.

Style tip: A small pop of black helps any space sing. We applied sparing stark black accents to give the eye a satisfying, full range of values from light to dark.

Pantone’s newest Colour of the Year is “Greenery”, and we expect to see even more leafy green shades in the coming year. Luckily, it’s also a timeless hue—we, like our clients, prefer to work beyond passing fads.

That’s why we love the fun, fresh, minty shade we used throughout this project—Benjamin Moore’s Salisbury Green. We love working with heritage houses, and we’re thrilled we were able to give this one a relaxed style that feels current and classic at the same time.

The bi-annual TIDG newsletter keeps you updated on our boutique studio—and our design family.

What is Comfort?

Our principal designer, Yanic Simard, has always felt that true interior style means not just an elegant look, but a deep sense of comfort. We believe that every element of your space should convey this essence of comfort—to the eye, the hand, and to your inner sense of serenity in your home.

To express what comfort means to us, and to our approach to design, we produced an inspirational short film titled “What is Comfort?”, now available to view online at any time at tidg.ca.

New Looks

TIDG has a brand new emblem— one that carries a blending of organic, modern, and traditional sensibilities, just like us.

To see more project images, visit tidg.ca/gallery, and @tidgboutique on Instagram.

